Large plastic bags of leafy greens, likely kale or chard, are stacked on the left side of the stall.

Two levels of wooden crates and baskets are filled with fresh produce. The top level features baskets of onions, cabbages, and leafy greens. The bottom level is dominated by large quantities of root vegetables, including carrots, potatoes, and parsnips.

Wooden crates on the right side of the stall are filled with various types of potatoes, including red and yellow varieties.

Underneath the produce displays, several rows of plastic crates are stacked. These include yellow crates, green crates, and orange crates, some of which are labeled with handwritten text like 'Rosa', 'White', and 'Savoy'. A green tarp is draped over the bottom left corner of the stall.

A green tarp is draped over the lower portion of the stall on the right, and a cardboard box with the text 'PRODUCE OF U.S.A.' is visible underneath.
